Savings and transitional provisions

6. (1) Every matter commenced under the former Law and partly dealt with by the Tribunal or the Appeals Tribunal when the new Law comes into force, is to be continued and dealt with in all respects as if the new Law had not come into force.

(2) Every matter commenced under the former Law and not wholly or partly dealt with by the Tribunal or the Appeals Tribunal when the new Law comes into force, is to be taken to be a matter commenced under the new Law and the provisions of the new Law are to apply accordingly.

(3) In the case of an appeal against any decision of the Tribunal or the Appeals Tribunal that has been commenced under or pursuant to section 48(4) of the former Law but not finally determined before the new Law comes into force, the Grand Court is to continue to deal with the appeal as if the new Law had not come into force; and when the appeal is finally determined, the former Law is to apply subject to any necessary modifications as if the appeal had been finally determined before the new Law came into force.

(4) In the case of an appeal against any decision of the Grand Court that has been commenced under or pursuant to section 48(7) of the former Law but not finally determined before the new Law comes into force, the Court of Appeal is to continue to deal with the appeal as if the new Law had not come into force; and when the appeal is finally determined, the former Law is to apply subject to any necessary modifications as if the appeal had been finally determined before the new Law came into force.

(5) In this section -

“Appeals Tribunal” means the Appeals Tribunal established under section 47 of the former Law;

“former Law” means the principal Law in force immediately before the date of commencement of this Law;

“new Law” means the principal Law as amended by this Law; and “Tribunal” means the Tribunal established under section 46(1) of the former Law.
